To whom it may concern,

I have had the pleasure of knowing Jonathan for the past nine years, which included four years of working together. Throughout those four years of working with Jonathan, I saw him grow immensely not only as a leader, but as an individual. Jonathan can complete complex tasks on his own while displaying a tireless work ethic. Jonathan has the rare innate self-motivation that enables him to complete anything he puts his mind to. Even though Jonathan works perfectly fine on his own, he is a tremendous team player.

Jonathan and I deployed together to Afghanistan in 2017. I was lucky to have Jonathan as a team member and there were very few people I trusted more than him. Jonathan always displayed selflessness and genuinely cared about the people that surrounded him. He often put himself second just to help other people even if it meant taking time from his personal life. I have seen Jonathan be a mentor to numerous individuals. He had and still has true concern and empathy for the world around him. This ability enables Jonathan to form a cohesive group and produces a team that will gladly work for him and with him to complete tasks.

Jonathan possesses excellent time management skills that allow him to function in high stress environments, identify core problems, and develop successful solutions. Jonathan continuously grows as an individual and never stops learning. He is also able to accept criticism, which he uses to grow and learn from.

I highly recommend Jonathan to your environmental studies program because of the various reasons listed above. I know Jonathan will succeed in anything he puts his mind to and will be a great asset to your program. It has truly been my pleasure to work with and know him for the past eight years. He has positively impacted my life and will most certainly continue to make a positive impact on the world.
