Dear Admissions Committee,

I am writing to express my genuine interest in pursuing a Master's in Environmental Studies, focusing in Marine Biology and Environmental Policy at The Evergreen State College. Combining my passion for marine biology and environmental policy, I am eager to contribute to and learn from the dynamic and interdisciplinary environment that Evergreen offers.

My fascination with marine biology has been a driving force throughout my academic journey and has led me to explore the intricate ecosystems that inhabit our oceans. The prospect of studying marine biology at Evergreen, known for its experiential and hands-on learning approach, is particularly appealing to me. I am excited about the opportunity to engage in fieldwork, research projects, and collaborative initiatives that will deepen my understanding of marine environments and their conservation.

One aspect of Evergreen's program that particularly resonates with me is the emphasis on experiential learning. I am eager to engage in fieldwork, internships, and collaborative projects that allow me to apply theoretical knowledge in real-world situations. The integrated and interdisciplinary nature of the curriculum, with its focus on the intersectionality of environmental issues, aligns with my belief that addressing complex challenges requires a multifaceted approach.

Additionally, my interest extends beyond the biological aspects of marine ecosystems to the realm of environmental policy. Recognizing the critical interplay between scientific knowledge and effective policy-making, I am eager to explore how these two fields intersect and inform each other. Evergreen's commitment to an interdisciplinary curriculum aligns perfectly with my desire to bridge the gap between scientific research and policy implementation, creating a positive impact on marine ecosystems and environmental conservation.

I am excited about the prospect of joining The Evergreen State College's Environmental Studies program and am confident that the program's unique blend of academic rigor, experiential learning, and commitment to sustainability aligns perfectly with my goals and values. I look forward to the opportunity to contribute to and thrive in this dynamic learning environment.

Thank you for considering my application. I am eager to bring my dedication and passion for environmental studies to The Evergreen State College.

Sincerely,

Enija Reed
