

To the Program Committee,

I am writing to recommend my colleague Emma Jones to your Master's Program in Teaching. Having earned my own Master's in Creative Writing, and taught English at a university level, I can attest that Emma has the qualifications to successfully navigate the rigors required of a student in your program. Emma is a person of steadfast character and intellect. She has been a colleague of mine for approximately eight years now. We have been close colleagues and collaborators in our creative pursuits since we met while earning our undergraduate degrees in English at Emmanuel College.

Emma has always strived to produce both creative and academic work of the highest caliber. I can attest to her driven nature, and her ability to function at the level required of a competitive Master's Program. When we originally met, she was often tutoring and guiding her peers with their own coursework. She values intellectual thought, and constantly pursues it in every aspect of her life. Adroit at both creative and academic writing, Emma can fully contend with any requirements of her. Having spent nearly a decade workshopping each other's various genres of work, I can claim with no exaggeration she is one of the brightest young writers today.

Beyond her excellency in the written word, her interpersonal skills are also highly developed. Emma is an outstanding and empathetic person. She values inclusivity and equity, and her professionalism is top-tier. These personal philosophies will be a good fit for the environment at your program. Additionally, her abilities to empathize and communicate effectively would serve her well as she moves forward in your program.

I write this letter to unreservedly offer my recommendation for Emma Jones into your Teaching Program. Should you need to contact me for any additional information, please do not hesitate to reach out.

Sincerely,

Seth Garcia
