Community Service History

Shannon West Homeless Youth Center:

Shannon West Homeless Youth Center is a community organization in Las Vegas that helps houseless communities with a special focus on youth homelessness. During my work here I helped paint the center several times, cleaned the kitchen, socialized with the residents and helped with some administrative work as well. This work was incredibly rewarding and, like Three Square, allowed me to work with a community that is stigmatized and underserved.

Lied Animal Shelter:

The Lied Animal Shelter is an animal shelter in Las Vegas that I volunteered with countless times. I helped walk and clean up after dogs and fed the animals as well. I think working with animals is incredibly rewarding. I have always loved animals and doing community work here helped me put that passion into practice. While my responsibilities were limited, I believe I did good work there and am very proud of it.

Sound Learning

The organization I did my fifty hours of community work at for that aspect of the Masters in Teaching application was Sound Learning in Shelton, WA. My work there consisted of helping immigrant populations with basic English skills. I went over stories and writing exercises with them and worked one on one to help more advanced students. My time here was amazing and it helped me really have some experience working in a classroom.

Three Square food bank:

Three Square is a community organization in my native Las Vegas that helps serve houseless communities in the area through clothing donations and a free food bank. While doing service there I assisted with food preparation, community outreach, cleaning the kitchens and facilities and assisting other volunteers with their own duties. I believe that this work helped strengthen my commitment to serving underserved communities, especially in regards to houseless people. It allowed me to have face to face interactions with a community that is often stigmatized, something I am eternally grateful for.

Extra-curricular activities

We the People

We the People was something I took part in during my time in high school. It was similar to a debate club in which me and my group were assigned topics and had to defend them with strong evidence. We were able to win regionals but unfortunately lost in state competition. Overall, this experience really helped me refine my communication skills and work on public speaking. I am super proud of the work me and my group did and feel as though it was extremely helpful in creating a good foundation in communication, something that is very important in education.
