To Whom It May Concern:

I recommend Ginger Brandt for the graduate program in Education at Evergreen State College. She is a natural in the classroom, passionate about best practices in education, and she understands the diverse needs of children.

Ginger worked as a para-educator in our preschool program here at Oakbrook Elementary. She was always going above and beyond her duties learning about the best ways to educate our youngest learners, and many of these learners had emotional, physical, and/or mental challenges. The children in her classroom always knew Ginger was a safe adult for them, and they often would prefer her over others. She was warm, loving, fair and firm when needed.

Ginger goes out of her way to learn about best practices in the classroom. She studied to learn the best ways to meet the needs of the students in her class. I know as a student in the Master's Program she will go above and beyond to learn and grow as an educator.

Ginger has a passion for students with special needs. She is a mother of a child with special needs. She advocates for the students, their families, and she works hard to ensure their needs are met and their IEP's are followed. She is extremely knowledgeable of the laws regarding students receiving special services.

Ginger will be a strong asset to the Master's in Education Program at Evergreen State College.

Warmly,

Danielle McGuire
