5000-5999 Graduate courses at Schools Abroad
6000-6999 Graduate courses at Language Schools
7000-7999 Graduate courses at Bread Loaf School of English

Credit/Calendar
Schools Abroad
A semester/academic year abroad is equivalent to a semester/academic year in the U.S. Start and end dates vary significantly but are normally tied to the academic calendar of the local universities where students take their mainstream courses. The normal course load for undergraduates is 4 to 5 courses per semester. For graduate students, the normal course load is 3 courses for the regular track and 4 to 5 courses for the accelerated track.

The suggested equivalent for one unit of undergraduate-level credit in the Schools Abroad is 4 semester hours for a four-unit course load and 3 semester hours for a five-unit course load. For graduate-level courses, the suggested equivalent is 3 semester hours.

Language Schools and School of the Environment
The Language Schools and the School of the Environment are conducted primarily in the summer term. The normal course load for programs in these schools varies by language and length of study, and ranges from 1 unit of credit to 4 units of credit. Details by degree, program, and language can be found on our website: www.middlebury.edu.

The suggested equivalent for one unit of credit in the Language Schools and School of the Environment is 3 semester hours or 4.5 quarter hours.

Bread Loaf School of English
The Bread Loaf School of English is conducted in the summer term. The normal course load is 2 units of credit. To qualify for a Master of Arts degree, students must successfully complete 10 units. To qualify for a Master of Letters degree, students must successfully complete 10 units beyond the Master of Arts degree.

The suggested equivalent for one unit of credit in the Bread Loaf School of English is 3 semester hours or 4.5 quarter hours.
