The Evergreen State College's Master in Teaching Program proudly invites you to join us for a day of exploration as our Teacher Candidates offer their findings from their inquiries into educational research. Teacher Candidates will summarize and critique relevant research and present findings and implications for elementary, middle-level, and secondary classrooms. Action research topics will include: effective integration of formative assessments into the classroom, implementing student-centered learning environments, opening doors between classrooms and communities, and using student-centered discourse to attend to the disruption of status inequities.
