Master of Environmental Studies

at The Evergreen State College

Evergreen has been a leader in environmental studies for more than 50 years. The Master of Environmental Studies (MES) program allows students to earn a master's degree in 2 or 3 years, that prepares students for the complex nature of professional environmental work. The program's interdisciplinary curriculum provides a solid foundation for careers in leadership and management in forestry, restoration and conservation, natural resource management, urban development, sustainable infrastructure, Geographic Information Systems, and environmental policy. You'll be able to create your own path, whether you enter with a clear goal or discover your passion along the way!
