What advice do you have for the institute conveners?

I only wish it was longer. Have you considered sending out a pre-institute survey?

It is challenging to fit important issues into a short time and also have breakout sessions. The balance went really well, but it would have been nice to have a longer session at the end to share ideas.

Make it 3 hours!

Use group time more effectively and have us in many different groups throughout the days. For a two-day seminar, I was only in 2 different breakout rooms, for less than an hour total time. These institutes should be modeling good remote classroom design.

This was informative. As an outsider, it is good to hear what new is going on in the MPA program.

Q9 - What could have been improved?

What could have been improved?

Nothing -- well done!

Just a little more time

I think the goals of these institutes could be more transparent, and should perhaps shift year-to-year. I feel like the last two years were heavily focused on how we can improve the MPA program. I think our MPA faculty and staff get a lot out of that (which may in fact be the point of these institutes, I don't know) but I'm not sure the attendees are. We talked about what has surprised us, for example, in public administration since the COVID outbreak and the Black Lives Matter incident, but we could have also dived deeper into best practices on how we're working through them, something everyone could benefit from.

We spent a long time on introductions, which was nice, but I felt like the rest of the time was a little rushed because of it.

Q10 - If a colleague asked you about your experience at this summer institute what would you say?

If a colleague asked you about your experience at this summer institute wha...

It was a useful exercise.

It was an excellent experience that brought together working parts from faculty, staff and community. I hope we have more like it.

It was a great opportunity to connect with colleagues and peers and get a glimpse of what everyone else is going through during this difficult time. I found the experience to be fun and inspiring. Too often the day to day drudge doesn't let you think and talk about bigger ideas and system improvement.

I'm glad I attended and I did get some helpful information, but it wasn't worth 2 days of my time (only 1).

It was good.
